

He built and resided in the house at Mason village, subsequently in possession of Deacon Abel Adams, and here most of his children were born. About 1815 he removed to New Ipswich, N. H., where he resided on what was known as the Knowlton place.